READ ME FIRST! Quick Start Guide

THIS IS A WORK IN PROGRESS! This world of Ai is moving so quickly, it's hard to keep up. Mike Koenigs 🙂

Knowing what I know now, after spending hundreds of hours figuring out how to apply Ai to every aspect of mine and my client's business and personal life, here's what I'd do to start using Ai in my business to get the most results that matter first and get my head around WHAT to use HOW to use it and HOW to get the best results by learning "the language of Ai and chat":

Step 1: Create a Free ChatGPT Account

Create a free ChatGPT account. This creative assistant will be your new BFF (Best Friend Forever) in the world of AI. Simply go to the OpenAI website and follow the instructions to sign up. Now this tool went from 0 to over one million, then ten then 100 million users faster than any platform in history. It might be busy and not let you log in. Fear not, there's a workaround if that happens to you. There's also a paid option for $20 per month that is always up...

Step 2: Try ChatGPT

Now that you have your ChatGPT account, it's time to get to know your new AI friend. Take a look at the prompts in this directory and try them out. You'll be amazed at the speed and accuracy of ChatGPT's responses.

Step 3: Use the Prompts and Use Cases in this Guide

This guide is filled with (and I'm constantly adding more) use cases and prompts that you can use right now for real-word challenges every business has. Writing emails. Creating job descriptions. Writing books. Copywriting. Sales letters. Prototyping websites and products. Doing research. You'll quickly learn that the most difficult thing to get your head around is what these tools WON'T help you with! When you are no longer constrained by time, money, or people, you'll realize your thinking and creativity is the primary limiter.

Step 4: Look at the Directories and Prompt Guides for Solutions to Any Business Challenge

Take a look at the directories FutureTools, AllThingsAi, FuturePedia and aitoptools.com for solutions to any business challenges you may be facing. These directories are packed with information and resources that will help you make the most of AI in your business. Also, here's a spreadsheet with over 600 Ai sites that are categorized (it's editable too!). Here's a large directory of prompts focused on marketers and marketing. And here's another one. And here's another one in Notion, just add to your account!

Step 5: Watch YouTube Videos on AI

Finally, start watching YouTube videos on AI that you find in the directories. This is a great way to learn more about AI and stay up-to-date on the latest developments. Start following the best creators and you'll be a pro in no time!

© MikeKoenigs.com and The Superpower Accelerator All Rights Reserved

Step 6: The Workaround if ChatGPT is Busy

If you can't get into ChatGPT due to load issues, the workaround is to head over to OpenAi.com, create an account and then go to "Playground". The user interface isn't as slick as ChatGPT and it's kind of programmer-ish in appearance, but the functionality is the same and you can always get in.

I'm doing my very best not to pile on more stuff - just dig in and start playing with the tools that follow.

The “Summ4Me” script to use with VoxScript Plugin:

ChatGPT: I want you to summarize this video into bullet points with an ELI5 explanation of each key topic, followed by a list of every website link, and the description of the links and any resources or books mentioned in the video and then follow up with an SOP process that describes how to do everything in this video step-by-step in a fashion that I can share with my executive assistant to do for me then include a email with a catchy subject line, requesting that my assistant learns this process and starts doing it for me in a positive voice.

The 5-Minute Marketing Campaign from a Flowchart

ChatGPT: I want you to turn the attached flowchart images into a step-by-step SOP that can be followed by a marketing team. Include details of every step.

© MikeKoenigs.com and The Superpower Accelerator All Rights Reserved

ChatGPT: Take the following website marketing copy and write a complete marketing campaign based on this SOP, written in the voice of Allison Maslan. Start by writing detailed invitation emails that include enough detail to engage an audience of business owners and CEOs to want to join. Use the testimonials and quotes whenever appropriate to create social proof.

Hey there! Let's dive right into setting up the ChatGPT iOS app on your iPhone or iPad. It's like having a super-smart buddy in your pocket, ready to help with all sorts of things. Here we go!

Step 1: Visit the App Store

- Start by tapping the App Store icon on your device. It's the blue one with the "A" made of sticks. Think of it as the doorway to app paradise.

Step 2: Search for ChatGPT

- Once in the App Store, hit the search icon (magnifying glass) at the bottom. Type "ChatGPT" in the search bar. It's like summoning a digital genie!

Step 3: Download the App

- You'll see ChatGPT in the search results. Tap "Get" next to it. If you've downloaded it before, you'll see a cloud icon instead. Tap that, and the download starts. It's free, so noo wallet worries!

Step 4: Open the App

- After downloading, tap "Open" to launch ChatGPT. You can also find the new icon on your home screen or app library. It's like opening a door to a world of AI knowledge.

Step 5: Sign In or Sign Up

- If you're new to ChatGPT, you'll need to sign up. Just some basic details, nothing too nosy. If you already have an account, just log in. Easy peasy!

Step 6: Explore and Set Preferences

© MikeKoenigs.com and The Superpower Accelerator All Rights Reserved

- Once you're in, take a tour of the app. You can adjust settings to make it feel just right for you. Like rearranging furniture in a digital room!

Step 7: Start Chatting

- Now for the fun part! Start typing your questions or prompts. Whether it's help with a recipe, understanding quantum physics, or just some chit-chat, ChatGPT is ready to roll.

What You Need to Know:

- Compatibility: Make sure your iOS device is running a relatively recent version of iOS. If your device has been catching Zs in a drawer for the last five years, it might need an update.
- Internet Connection: ChatGPT is a cloud-based wizard. It needs a stable internet connection to work its magic. WiFi or mobile data – both do the trick.
- App Size: It's not a space hog. The app won't eat up your device's memory like a digital Pac-Man.

Why It's Awesome:

- It's like having a mini-expert in your pocket. Need quick facts or deep insights? You got it.
- It's user-friendly. The interface is as easy as having a chat over coffee.
- It's versatile. Homework help, travel tips, language learning – it's a Swiss Army knife of apps.

And there you have it! Installing and setting up ChatGPT on your iOS device is a walk in the tech park. Dive in and start exploring what this cool AI tool can do for you. Happy chatting! 🚀📱✨

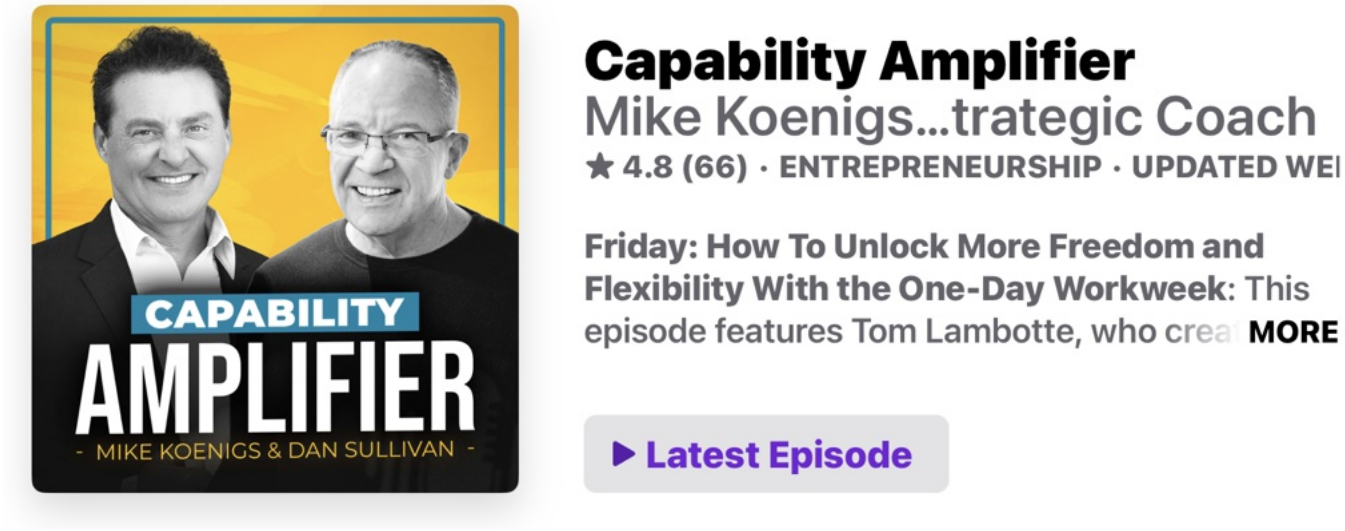
Podcast Promotion Use Case

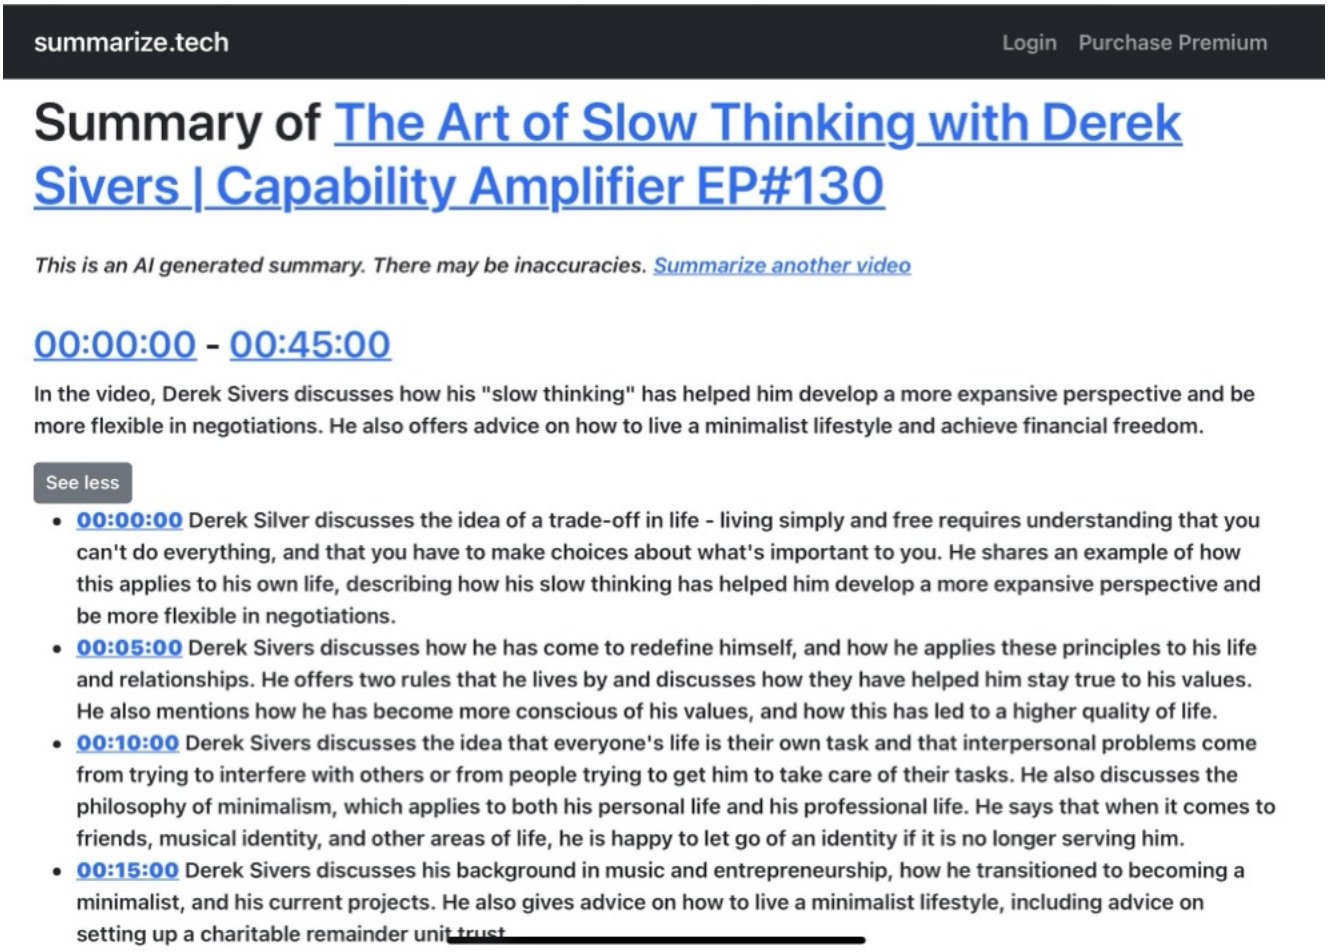


Every week, Dan Sullivan and I (and some guests) produce an episode of Capability Amplifier (and right now is a good time to subscribe to it!)

Writing social posts is a total PITA (pain in the old you know what), and it's rare that a social media specialist can do a good job of crafting quality social posts that get clicks. Here's a "stacked workflow" that uses a "YouTube Summarizer" and ChatGPT to write Twitter and LinkedIn posts.

First, I pasted a video version of our podcast into www.summarize.tech which grabs captions from YouTube videos and summarizes them in 30 seconds:

© MikeKoenigs.com and The Superpower Accelerator All Rights Reserved



Then, I pasted that summary into ChatGPT with this prompt:

Here are the results:

1. "Elevate your perspective & achieve financial freedom with the Capability Amplifier Podcast! Learn from Derek Sivers on the power of slow thinking 💡 Listen now: http://www.MrBz.com/CA #CapabilityAmplifier #SlowThinking #FinancialFreedom"

“The Prompt to Rule them All”

I want you to become my Prompt Creator. Your goal is to help me craft the best possible prompt for my needs. The prompt will be used by you, ChatGPT. You will follow the following process: 1. Your first response will be to ask me what the prompt should be about. I will provide my answer, but we will need to improve it through continual iterations by going through the next steps. 2. Based on my input, you will generate 3 sections. a) Revised prompt (provide your rewritten prompt. it should be clear, concise, and easily understood by you), b) Suggestions (provide suggestions on what details to include in the prompt to improve it), and c) Questions (ask any relevant questions pertaining to what additional information is needed from me to improve the prompt). 3. We will continue this iterative process with me providing additional information to you and you updating the prompt in the Revised prompt section until it's complete.

Here’s another one:

Here is the prompt if you wish to use it for your own use: "You, ChatGPT, will be my prompt engineer. We will iterate the prompts you output in order to arrive at a prompt that gives me the desired output.
The first output you give me will ask what the prompt will be about, with some questions to get us on the right track. Then once you have an initial understanding of what the prompt is about, you will provide me with the first iteration. Then you will ask more questions to make the prompt better.
We will continue this iterative process until we have arrived at the prompt we need to generate my desired output."

David Ogilvy's 19 Rules for Getting Clients

David Ogilvy, a legendary copywriter and advertising pioneer, revolutionized the industry with his unique, persuasive techniques. Known as "The Father of Advertising," he founded Ogilvy & Mather, now a global advertising powerhouse. His most important ads include the iconic Rolls-Royce campaign, Hathaway shirts, and Schweppes. Among his top 3 headlines are: 1) "At 60 miles an hour the loudest noise in this new Rolls-Royce comes from the electric clock," which showcased luxury and precision; 2) "The man in the Hathaway shirt," introducing the unforgettable eye-patch-wearing gentleman; and 3) "Schhh...You know who," cleverly highlighting Schweppes' brand mystique.

I thought I'd add some of his most iconic rules for getting clients just because he's one of my all-time heroes.

1. Regard the hunt for new clients as a sport. David believed in getting dead serious about new business after he landed it. Until then — save yourself from dying of ulcers over lost clients. Approach the search for new clients with "light-hearted gusto". Play to win but enjoy the fun.

2. Never work for a client so big you can't afford to lose them. Why? The fear of losing them, alone, will wreck your life. You will be unable to give candid advice. Ogilvy famously turned down Ford, saying: "Your account would represent one-half of our total billing. This would make it difficult for us to sustain our independence in council.

3. Take immense pain in selecting your clients. On average, Ogilvy would turn down about 60 clients a year. You too should be choosing clients before they choose you. The truth is first-class agencies aren't in high supply. You have the power to select who you work with, so do it carefully.

4. Only add 1 new client every 2 years. You want to keep the clients you have. For life. That should be your #1 goal. And if you're working with great clients and keeping them, then you'll need only a few clients. David Ogilvy also discovered other reasons adding too many new clients hurt his business. Growing too fast led to hiring too fast. This led to not having well-trained staff. That led to diverting too much of his agency's best brain power away from servicing old clients and failing at keeping clients for life. Plus starting new clients off is often the most difficult work; because you're building everything from scratch. So screw finding new clients, keep old ones.

5. Only seek clients with a product or service you are proud of. Unlike lawyers and doctors, professionals in the creative field can't detach themselves from their work. If you privately despise your client's product or service, you will fail. You need to have a personal fondness for the client you service before you can help them succeed.

6. Only accept a client if you can improve their existing work. Ogilvy was famous for turning down the New York Times because he "didn't think (he) could produce better advertisements than the brilliant ones they had been running." Don't think you can create better work than what's already there? Don't take on the client.

7. Don't take on clients whose business is dying. This can be tough when you need work, but if a client approaches you who you know won't be able to stay in business, regardless of if they hire you, don't take them on. It doesn't matter how great your work is, nothing you do will make up for their deficiencies. You may be hungry for work, but the success of your clients ultimately defines you. Your profit margin is too slim to survive a prospective client's bankruptcy.

8. Only work for clients who want you to make a profit. Just because you produce results for a client doesn't mean you will automatically see those profits come your way. Every client service firm treads a thin line between over-servicing clients and going broke, or under-servicing them and getting fired. Make sure your client's understand that you too are making money — by helping them make money. Make sure they understand you are planning to take a percentage of their profit (however small). Don't shy away from it and don't pretend otherwise.

9. Don't publicly pursue clients. If a client announced they were considering hiring Ogilvy, he would withdraw his company from the race. His reason? "I like to succeed in public, fail in secret."

10. Getting new clients is a solo performance. The person who decides to hire you is almost always the top decision maker at the company. David believed, "Chairmen should be harangued by chairmen." Additionally, he felt having too many people on sales calls caused confusion. That's why singularity is an important ingredient in winning accounts.

11. Remain flexible when selling clients. It's OK to rehearse for sales calls but David hated speaking from prepared text. A slide deck or written text locks you into a position which may become irrelevant during the meeting.

12. Tell prospects about your weaknesses. David picked this up from antique dealers. He realized that when a dealer drew your attention to a flaw in the furniture, he almost always gained your trust. If you do this too — before the client notices your flaws on their own, you will also gain their trust. It will make you more credible when you boast about your strong points.

13. Don't get bogged down in case-studies or research numbers. These things put prospects to sleep. "No manufacturer ever hired an agency because it increased market-share for somebody else." Clients care about themselves, talk about them.

14. Explicitly tell clients why they should hire you. The day after a new client meeting, David would send the client a 3-page letter on why they should pick him. Today you can send an equally brief email to help clients make the right decision.

15. Don't pay an outside source a commission for new business. David Ogilvy believed the type of clients this brought in weren't worth the trouble. Today commission-based lead finders include recruiters, head-hunters, and even other freelancers.

16. Beware of clients who have no budget but a great idea. Even though they might become huge if everything goes well, it's more likely that things won't go well. Servicing these companies will be expensive for you and very few of them will ever make it worth your while.

17. Don’t underestimate personality. The difference between client service firms is not as big as we like to believe. Most can show they produced results that increased sales for some of their clients. Very often the difference in new business depends on the personality of the head of the agency. Know you will win and lose some clients because of your personality.

18. Fire clients at least 5 times more often than you get fired. Always do it for the same reason: if their behavior erodes the morale of the people working on their account. Do not allow this from any client.

19. Use what you specialize in to find new clients. David Ogilvy created ads selling his ad agency. You should dog-food your own service too. So how does your work help clients? Can it help you in the same way? For example, do you help them find customers by creating content? Create content for your agency. Do you do graphic design? Create infographics for potential clients. The trick will be to not just make things that you like or impress people in your industry, but to make things that impress potential clients.

20. Build a waiting list of would- be clients."Try as I may, I have never been able to space the acquisition of new accounts at convenient intervals. For months on end, nothing happens. I begin to wonder if we will ever get another account. My staff becomes despondent. Then we get three beauties in rapid succession, and the load of urgent work becomes unbearable. The only solution is to build a waiting list of would- be clients, and to admit them one by one at times of our own choosing. That will be the day."
